How Freeman Fight

None but those who went through the inferno can hope to comprehend the conditions which prevailed in Dunkirk during the evacuation of the Flemish army; the courage and skill of the airmen, naval men and merchant seamen who made the evacuation possible; or the unshakable devotion of the rear guard troops who held back the enemy while the army was embarking. Nor the suicidal heroism of the little garrison in the citadel at Calais.

Against these men perverted ingenuity and scientific savagery turned all the implements of modern war as men have never been turned against men in any other part of the world. And they "stuck." Not only in individual cases, or in groups, but in thousands. That is the significant fact. It was a mass demonstration of what the freedom of the democratic countries can and will do. They may be killed; they cannot be stampeded or conquered.

Not Catching Up

The number of building permits issued in Edmonton during May broke all monthly records for ten years. Included in the list were permits for one hundred new dwelling houses, which probably also set up a new time record.

This addition to Edmonton living-quarters will not of course make up any part of the existing shortage of accommodation. At the rate the city is growing, enough people will come in during the year to fill two or three times this number of houses. At best the May permits represent only a good instalment on the amount of new accommodation that will be required to house the new-comers of the year.

If this emphasizes the need of far more construction than is yet taking place, it equally emphasizes the point that building houses in Edmonton should be a profitable investment for a long time to come.

Judged by the conditions which exist in other cities, by the conditions which used to exist here, by the impossibility of strictly enforcing sanitary regulations, there is a standing opportunity in this city for the employment of large amounts of capital in providing additional living space, with practically no danger that the thing will be overdone.

The Country That Disarmed

Those with good memories will recall that some years ago Denmark set Europe an example in disarmament. It was announced that the Danish army would be reduced to the proportions of a police force, as a matter of public policy. This was done. As a consequence Denmark was occupied by the army of the Fuehrer with almost no opposition, the only skirmish reported being the result of a misunderstanding.

Had Denmark been prepared to fight, its fate would probably have been the same. It could not hope, without active and large-scale assistance from the Allies, to seriously challenge the might of the powerful Reich. Recognition of its helpless position was the dominant factor which led years ago to the adoption of what was virtually a non-resistance policy, coupled with a vain hope that Germany would not again launch a war of conquest.

But what has happened to Denmark will do nothing to convince other European countries that they too should have disarmed, or should disarm in future. For the time Denmark has ceased to exist as an independent country. Should Germany win, it will undoubtedly be formally annexed to the Reich. If it is rescued from that fate, this will be because other countries did not follow its well-meant but too trustful lead.

The Objectives Were Not Gained

If the battle in Flanders had to be set down in the record as a technical defeat for the Allies, it is at least not certain that it was anything more than that. The entrapped army was not destroyed. The Channel ports of Dunkirk and Calais did not fall directly into Nazi hands, and may hold out indefinitely. If victory means the obtaining of the objectives in view, the enemy failed to gain one and may not gain the other.

For this as yet bootless success, a terrific price was paid. German losses are placed at a half million men since the raid into Holland and Belgium, a thousand or more airplanes, a still greater number of tanks and enormous stores of equipment and supplies of all kinds. While these are estimates only, they are made by those in position to guess with fair accuracy, and the figures may as easily be below the mark as over it.

It is rather obvious that Herr Hitler hoped by this offensive to deal the Allies such a shattering blow that Mussolini would feel it safe to come to his assistance and help with the mopping-up operations. The non-belligerency of the bellicose Benito has been a sign known and read of all men that he was not sure Adolf could win. Perhaps the outcome has resolved the doubts of Il Duce on that point, but the probability is he is still asking himself when the mopping-up is to start, and which side will be doing it when it does start.

The Canadian Legion convention at Montreal was told that an agent of the Nazi government who carried on propaganda work in Alberta was arrested "on the complaint of German families" he had tried to pervert, and is now in an internment camp. Incidents of this kind should be taken into account when assessing allegations of treasonable intent are made against Canadians of German origin.

Vancouver police report they have found no evidence of incendiary having been responsible for the burning of four houses and a school building on the waterfront there. The fire, they say, was caused by spontaneous combustion of inflammable materials. That two of the buildings were engaged in Government work led to widespread suspicion that enemy agents might have been to blame. The report of the police investigators should be noted pending the outcome of the present strained state of popular feeling it is important that suspicion be promptly dismissed when it is shown to be unfounded.

From the Files of The Edmonton Bulletin

Scott Simpson of the H. B. Co. and Mr. Campbell, owner of the Bulletin, had been made for general sports the day passed very quietly.

May 24th was observed as a holiday in Edmonton, but no special observance had been made for the day. The day passed very quietly. Battledore parties recently sent a challenge to run their fast horse Bullwhacker against Campbell's Serrol. Mr. Campbell telegraphed that he would make a match for July 1 at Edmonton, 14-mile, stakes from $200 to $500.

The new bicycle ordered for the use of the town police was received Monday, and is now in use, the guarantee of peace having already become prevalent in its manipulation.

Eight scows are being loaded with flour at Waller's river for the H.B. post at Onion Lake. D. J. Collins brought in a car load of horses from the south yesterday.

Edmonton and Strathcona joined forces to celebrate the capture of Pretoria. A half-holiday was proclaimed in both towns. Processions from the two towns were formed during the afternoon and, headed by their bands, marched to the bridge, where they met and proceeded to the exhibition grounds. Here a number of races and athletic events were carried out.

World-Wide Objective

By BRITANNICA

British statesmen have been reproved, by correspondents in the British commonwealth overseas, for emphasizing the European aspect of allied war aims.

The report is fair. It is not merely to alter the map of Europe that Great Britain and her allies of the empire are resolved to win the war against Nazi Germany at whatever cost. Their cause and their objectives are world-wide.

Yet, although over-emphasis of the need for building a new order, specifically in Europe is to be regretted, it is wholly natural. For the whom we fight is a European power. The occasion of the war was an act of flagrant aggression in Europe. As this is being written, lie all the theatres of active land warfare.

Again, when we come to express our war aims in concrete terms, we must needs begin with the liberation of European states enslaved to Nazi Germany—Czechoslovakia, Poland, Denmark, Norway. At this stage, it is hard to express other war aims with half-sure definition.

The defeat of Nazi Germany in Europe, moreover, is the condition precedent of achieving our war aims in the wider world. Until the military dread of Hitler and his hordes has been raised from the consciousness of Europe (including therewith Great Britain and Ireland), there will be no basis on which to secure the larger effort that we burn to make towards world-wide economic and political progress.

The world order waits on European order. Nor should the extra-European peoples, fighting side by side with Great Britain and France, be aggrieved to find that we cannot complain that war aims in Europe can be more precisely expressed than war aims in their own continents and oceans.

Rather they should be proud. For the fundamental reason is that, in every quarter of the world, outside Europe, the right of freedom and ordered progress have already been secured.

North America, does Australasia, and the British Empire and Asia where the writ of British and French imperial power, live in constant fear of aggression (gradually being torn to the teeth, followed by subjection to a ruthless racial tyranny) who Indians would exchange the position of their country for that of, say, Rumania today, certainly independent foreign state though also free.

There has indeed been grave aggression, in this generation, in Africa and in what the countries of the British Commonwealth, and of France—Beyond—their borders.

And then—WORLD PROGRESS for is not the mere foundations of the good life as nations and citizen-states of the world, but the chance to go on building the super-structure.

The British Commonwealth is fighting for a chance to work out its own destiny, as a community of nations raised to the level of nations to greater economic welfare and political stature. The new world order, which we hope to fertilize with the fruits of the European war, can be expressed in these very terms.

To turn the jungle of sovereign states into a community of nations; to secure for each and all of the greater economic welfare and to establish the conditions in which each can rise to its full political stature and make its full contribution to world progress—these are the wider war aims of the allies in every continent.

On This Date

By FRED WILLIAMS

Twenty-five years ago Mr. Robert Laird Borden was finding out that a very real trouble-some member of his cabinet family in the person of General Sam Hughes, his minister of militia. Early in June, 1915, the prime minister was so worried by the minister's attitude towards the war materials that he commissioned Chief Justice Sir Charles P. Davidson of Montreal to inquire into the matter. The inquiry was a long one. Hughes took this as a reflection both upon himself and upon his administration, and he refused to meet the commission. He was so angry that he was noted. Sir Robert wrote in his memoirs:

"On June 2, I had a complaint from the governor-general with regard to the conduct of General Hughes. On June 5, I had to take up with Hughes his extraordinary ebullitions (there had been a further outburst on June 4). On June 10 my diary contains the following:

"Sharp reproof to Hughes for insolent language to H.R.H. concerning telegram to Kitchener. He was much cut up when I spoke to him in afternoon over the telephone he broke down and wept. Must meet him tomorrow."

"Mercurial" was a modest description of the war minister's temperament. His whole soul was in his job; he would brook no interference with his plans; and often resented a curb must be put on the tongue. Still, in spite of his temper, Sam Hughes was the right man in the right place in 1914, and to him belongs the credit for the quick mobilization of the first C.E.F.

Small War Bonds

A feature of the sale of the "baby" bonds that will interest many people is the fact that, while the bonds are for a 7½-year term, they can be cashed at any time after six months by those who have urgent need for the money. In that case, less interest will be paid than the three per cent on the bonds that run to maturity.

It is of more assistance to the government, and better for those who buy these bonds, if they are paid at the end of the term. But it will be reassuring to many people, who wish to help with the war in any way they can but who might be afraid to tie up their money for seven years, to know that, in case of necessity, they can obtain it, with interest probably quite equal to bank interest.—Winnipeg Free Press.

The Churches and the War

"Make no mistake, if the evil forces now threatening us have their way, we will witness a 'blackout' of all that we hold dear as Christians," emphatically declared Dr. John W. Woodside, moderator of the United Church, speaking to the Saskatchewan conference of his denomination. "Our cause, we are sure, is just and right. The issue is neither of our making or our seeking. It has been forced upon us. . . . The United Church of Canada will continue to stand for the right of life upon her. Every resource at her disposal will be used to strengthen the high resolve of our people and to tie up with whom we have years, to know that, in case of necessity, they can obtain it, with interest probably quite equal to bank interest.—Winnipeg Free Press.

The United Church of Canada, too, has just been party to another striking pronouncement in church circles on the war. This is a joint statement issued by the heads of the United Church of Canada, the Presbyterian Church of Ontario and Quebec, the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and the United Church of Christ. The statement declares that our cause is the cause of Christian civilization, and that divine power and guidance will be given to win the war. "We call upon all to whom God and righteousness are the supreme realities of life to give themselves to this sacred cause with singlemindedness and devotion. . . . What our cause will secure for us and our children the precious things won for us in the sacrifice of our fathers." The statement concludes by saying that the United Church of Canada will further strengthen the nation's resolve for more trying days that probably lie ahead.—Regina Leader-Post.

The Home Front

Perhaps, at long last, Canadian citizens, in the great majority, are aware that this country is at war and that it is a total war, which means that we are in it inescapably with "all we have and are." The aspect of the evolution of pre-war events, which was so deeply disturbing to observers (gradually being absorbed) of Canada, is the fact that these developments will secure for us and our children the precious things won for us in the sacrifice of our fathers." The statement concludes by saying that the United Church of Canada will further strengthen the nation's resolve for more trying days that probably lie ahead.—Regina Leader-Post.

That the Nazi movement was revolutionary and bound to express itself in internal violence (which was immediately displayed) and in external aggression (promptly asserted) was needed to keep the movement alive, and that Europe could not exist half free and half totalitarian. It was a fact which could have been patent to all observers. But, as we now know only too bitterly, those who were in positions of power and responsibility in practically all the European countries that did not or would not see it, with the result that the public in all these countries, when suddenly plunged into it, was mentally unprepared to recognize the full significance of what modern war would mean to the individual.

It was this that in Great Britain, it was this that in Canada, it was this that in any citizen, going about his daily work, to realize that he was himself individually at war and that the consequences to him might be calamitous.

That the country was at war; that it was right at war; that this would involve participation in the war with men and machines; that there would be a heavier burden of taxation—these realities and others akin to them were not the sort of thing that would be accepted by all. But all these things were matters for the government. It would do what was necessary, with the aid of the people, to meet the emergency. In due time—there was general agreement that it would be a long and somewhat leisurely war—as the result of these sacrifices, the inevitable and satisfactory end would be reached.

This complacency—this is the word that fits it and it is being applied reluctantly to the attitude of governments and individuals alike—has everywhere been destroyed; and has been replaced by an awareness of the danger of the situation, by a realization of the magnitude of the task, by a sense of the desperate issues that are in balance.

That the Canadians have awakened to the realities, they ought to understand that the strategy of the allied powers is to foil the efforts of the Nazis to effect a sudden decision by total victory, and that thereafter to preserve the peace of strength, by courage, patience and endurance to so change the balance that victory will be ultimately attained. It will be a hard and protracted long road. Our men in the field, on the sea and in the air have those qualities and have set their feet upon this road. But they can only follow it resistlessly to the end if the home-front matches them in coolness, steadfastness, patience—most essential—quality—and courage. The home-front is made up of individuals, every one of whom, as we have said, is in the war; and its strength and endurance will be the sum of these individual qualities.—Winnipeg Free Press.

To our zoo. The new system of purified air may, however, enable us to keep some alive." Saints, like penguins, often languish in the polluted air of wilderness. They cannot breathe it and live. But they have aware that the prayer closet and the fellowship of disciples—to which they may go to fill their souls with the pure oxygen of the power of God.

Chained by the suffocating atmosphere of wilderness all about us, we turn to the Lord, for shelter and strength. We seek the calm and rest and it is found beneath the Mercy Seat. Amen.—Winnipeg Free Press.

McCoy Health Service

The patient with a "nervous heart" or with "nervous trouble," is said to have a cardiac neurosis. In this condition the functioning of the heart is upset, although the heart itself is organically sound. One of the symptoms commonly complained of is pain through the left side of the chest. In fact, these purely nervous cases, there may be more pain than in a more serious case involving actual damage to the heart structure. Nervous stress or strain, emotional stress, mental overwork, and fatigue may increase the symptoms experienced by the patient. Another common symptom is a change in the regular, even beating of the heart. The usual change is a rapid beating of the heart or tachycardia. The patient may say the heart races or pounds or he may say he feels the heart throb in the area, or that he feels the heart which is a loud thump. Naturally, he is frightened by these findings, which may have the utmost reality and the more aware he becomes, the worse the heart misbehavior. It is characteristic of these nervous cases that the symptoms may come on when the patient is at rest. A thorough physical examination is needed in these nervous heart cases. When the examination is carefully given, the physician will find the patient has no organic heart disease. There is a double benefit. First, the patient becomes convinced that the heart itself is sound, by reason of the fact that the physician has examined it. Second, this finding in itself reassures the patient and gives him back his confidence in his heart. A nervous heart condition is essentially curable. While not all patients bothered in this manner receive a cure, a cure is possible for a great many if they are treated in the right way. The patient needs encouragement and reassurance along the path and if he falls into the right hands and is willing to put forth his own effort, the cure is not far off. The patient is being greatly helped, if not altogether cured. Those interested in nervous heart conditions would find the following articles of value: "Nervous Heart Patients" and "When the Heart Beats Too Fast." Send for these articles free. Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDERED

Our usual sense of protection toward our babies leads us to over-protect them with clothing. We still consider a starchy, cool blouse as being necessary to the child instead of being as comforting to him as to us.

It has taken years to convince mothers that women are not necessary for even the winter baby. Some of them, unfortunately, still think a bit of wool is needed on the summer baby.

Areas of tiny, brittle eruptions on the baby's back and neck and in the deep creases of the body should warn the mother that the baby is too warm. When the skin is kept cool with cool sponge baths and the baby dressed lightly in all-weather garments, prickly heat should never trouble him.

DRESS LIGHTLY

During the hot portions of the day the baby will be happiest with only a diaper. If he may be taken out without such informal attire might prove shocking, then the lightest cotton dresses or one of those adorable sunsuits made for babies as young as six months, will just fill the bill.

Runabouts, it goes without saying, will spend the summer in a sunsuit, short socks and high-top shoes, according to age.

In addition to clothes there are two other ways to let the baby be indifferent to the temperature. Water, quantities of it, internally and externally, is a safe rule to summer. Cut the infant's formula down by adding water to it. Keep a cup within reach on the kitchen sink and let the baby drink it as much as he wants. If it is faster and not too water, they can't hurt themselves.

Baths, both sponge and tub, can't be overdone. The baby doesn't need soap suds but once daily, but he can be sponged off with tepid water as often as necessary to keep his body cool.

Keep in mind that it is the hot and wetted baby who gets the balks. It is the damp-kissed baby who catches the sniffles when the colder wind blows up. The baby who is dressed comfortably and kept cool by baths and a cooling diet, can withstand high temperatures without being made ill. There are no real dangers of good summer care.

FLOWER FRESH PRINCESS Easy To Make

Just Too Much

LONDON—Care of a three-year-old child by a girl, the London Midland and Southern railway caused the authorities to establish a new rule. "A child can travel without being accompanied by an adult."

Dorothy Dix Says:

Dear Miss Dix—Will you please air our society class by answering the following questions: (1) What is a good, feminine girl like to find in a boy? What is a girl? What is a perfect gentleman? Why do girls wear make-up? (2) What qualities do girls like to find in a boy? What is a girl's life? How long should the courtship period be? How can we improve manners within the school? How can we make dates desirable friends? How can we sit at a table with grace?

THE SOCIOLOGY CLASS

Answer—Never having been bitten by Helen's dog, I don't pretend to know all the answers, but here's my guess at the conundrums you propose: I think boys begin by wanting girls to be easy on the eye. They like girls who are clean and healthy, but in talk too much. They like girls who know how to do things, good housewives and good friends, and who can play on musical instruments, or make the better.

They like girls to be intelligent but they like their brains—if they are covered, and not to surprise them in anything they do.

The best definition ever given of a perfect gentleman was that by the Hon. Charles G. Dole, that a gentleman is a man who remembers others but never forgets himself.

Girls like boys who are manly and who show that they are going to grow up to something when they grow up. They like boys who are clean within and without.

They like boys who can keep a conversation going and make a girl work like a coal heater to entertain them; who can drive a car without breaking all the speed laws; who can dance without stepping on a girl's feet and who can get her out of her, who doesn't expect to be paid with five dollar worth of getting for a five-cent coin.

A perfect lady is a woman who has sweetest, gentleness, sincerity, loyalty, tenderness, sympathy and intelligence, and who makes the world a better place because she lives in it.

No one can set a definite date for how long a courtship should be. Generally speaking, however, it should be long enough for girl and boy to get well acquainted with each other and not so long that they are tired of each other even before they marry.

You can improve manners while the school is setting up an ideal of gracious conduct and practicing it yourself.

You can choose desirable friends by selecting those who are going to do in life later-life by selecting as companions girls who are good of high character and intelligence.

The way to stay happily married is to follow the Golden Rule. Treat your wife as you would like her to treat you. DOROTHY DIX

RACING DOES DO NOT CHASE THE HUNTER FOR FOOD

The mechanical rabbit which kept aloof of the greyhound in race no matter how fast it is a real rabbit that has been snuffed. It is moved by mechanical means. The dog does not regard it as food, but as a "puzzle"—something to keep up with. When dogs have been permitted to catch the rabbit, they do not try to eat it, but they chase it again as soon as it is released. Racing dogs show great interest in the way they jockey for the race position. They follow by sight rather than smell, and their speed is so great that they can catch a rabbit in a flash.

Track owners do not usually own dogs that race here.

Your Figure, Madame!

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Did you know that it is your diaphragm that really counts and not your chest expansion? That is the way a singer stands has everything to do with the ease with which she issues off the high notes. That's what you must never control "breathless"? Or that many of the top-flight lightweight stars take daily singing lessons for the sake of their speaking voices?

Well, if you know all the answers you have probably been taking singing lessons yourself. But if you are the average person, working hard to get along and just becoming aware of an additional value placed on a pleasant speaking voice, the way you will stimulate your imagination to a practi-

REL CROSS RALLYING FOR OVERSEAS

Huge Amount of Supplies,
Dressings Being Sent
From Alberta

Alberta branch of the Canadian Red Cross are rallying to the requests for help from Britain. Already 75,000 parcels of supplies and 15,000 surgical dressings have gone forward from the province and attention is now being turned to the great need from France.

There are 23,000 hospital beds being used for war service in France. In addition there are 5,000, 1,000 refugees in deplorable conditions already in the country, and the French capital, seeking rescue and safety.

The immediate problem of the French Red Cross is the supplying of blankets for this host of suffering humanity. The Canadian Red Cross is coming to the rescue.

Blankets of wool only, either new or good as new, are required. If you have any, please contribute in touch with your nearest Red Cross branch at 401 Main St.

MORE SURVIVAL NEEDS

With intensification of the war in France, Red Cross calls are insisted for more survival supplies. Workers are urged to increase their efforts and to send every completed article to the nearest Red Cross branch.

Auxiliaries supplying regimental comforts for Canadian soldiers overseas may ship them through the Red Cross, provided they are plainly marked with the name of the soldier to receive them and its location, also a record of the contents of the parcel and the name and address of the sender.

Such parcels need not contain foodstuffs, tobacco, cigarettes, matches or lighter fluid. These can be delivered outside of Great Britain.

Thieves Fail To Get Lost In Two Break-Ins Today

Two attempted robberies failed to net the perpetrators reward in the hours of Tuesday night.

After cutting through a screen and breaking a glass in the rear door of the Edmonton County Fur Farm Supply, 5019 129 avenue, three thieves entered the building to take anything of value.

Premises of the Associated Distributors, 1104 100 avenue, were entered through a broken window on the west side of the building. An amount of cash hidden in the office was not located.

Civic Census

Fifty-four persons, with books under their arms and pencils sharpened and ready for use, walked out of the offices of City Assessor J. M. Walker at city hall today to begin the task of taking the annual census of the city. It will take the crew about a month. They will be every where in the city.

CAMP LEADERS TOLD OF NEEDS FOR POSITION

Concern for Individual
Necessity Says
"Y" Secretary

Responsible leadership in boys' and girls' camps is founded on concern for the individual child rather than for the camp as a whole. It is based, too, on the awareness of the necessity of social competence in the children, declared Rev. T. Rose, Y.M.C.A. general secretary, speaking at the two-day conference of the camp directors of the city in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening.

The conference is being sponsored by the Edmonton Council of Social Agencies.

The conference was attended by delegates of various camp organizations of the city, with a number of papers read, and discussions regarding health, safety, food and recreation questions. The camp will continue Tuesday evening.

Speaking on "Objectives of the Day Camping," Mr. Rose pointed out that while the physical requirements of a camp are important, it is far more important that the camp should be a place where the child learns to live with himself and with the child, develop his attitudes, and develop his social competence.

At the same time, the camp should be a place where the child learns to live with himself and with the child, develop his attitudes, and develop his social competence.

ALIENS MAY BE TAKEN AWAY FROM BRITAIN

Canada Considered Place Of Internment For Prisoners

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, June 4.—War Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today that the government is considering internment of alien prisoners of war in places remote from the British Isles in order to prevent their possible co-operation with German aircraft or parachute troops.

Canada has been mentioned as a possible safe place of internment for these prisoners and aliens. Mr. Eden said German parachute troops were equipped with heavy machine guns, infantry guns and light howitzers in addition to their "usual arms."

HOSPITAL SHIPS BOMBED
The secretary also charged the enemy had "deliberately" bombed hospital carriers in circumstances "intended to cause the maximum damage to the humanitarian work of the Red Cross."

He said this was done "in complete disregard of the immunity given hospital equipment by international agreement." He said the German government was a party to the Geneva Convention.

Burckhardt, a Swiss who came to this district in 1925, appeared before Magistrate A. S. Elliott Saturday. He is not a naturalized Canadian citizen. Burckhardt denied making the statements but admitted saying that Bible prophesies had told him that the British and Russian forces would be defeated by Sweden, Denmark and Norway against Britain, France, Italy and Spain.
